For those who may harbor any doubt that Pioneer has thrown its lot wholly in with the Connected Generation, let me present Exhibit A: the VSX-60 AV receiver. The new model's design bears a close resemblance to those of its predecessors, and any updates in its functions and features are more incremental than otherwise. But when you add everything up, the verdict seems pretty clear.

Two years ago I would say its the best sounding reveiver you can buy for under $1000. But since then I upgraded to the vsx-35tx. I dont know what the other guy a few posts down was talking about saying the 35tx doesnt have Burr-Brown DAC's. I called up Pioneer and they assured me that it does but the web site doesnt say anything about it.
